1. The number of clinical sessions per week each GP at the practice is contracted to work, and the average number actually worked.
2. The number of whole-time equivalent (WTE) GPs providing services at the practice, compared with the number of individual GPs registered to the practice.
3. The average weekly hours each named GP spends delivering clinical services at the practice, including any periods during which the practice has been without a resident GP.
4. The proportion of appointments delivered by GPs compared with other clinicians (e.g. advanced nurse practitioners, physician associates, practice pharmacists).
